1973 – Josie, Francis and their three young sons arrive in Samoa seeking a new life, their relationship already precarious. They hope island life will heal their differences but when Francis abandons his family to return to London Josie finds herself marooned. The bottle calls her but she throws herself into work and falls in love. A series of events showing a darker side of Samoa make her question whether this is the right place to bring up her family after all. She returns to England where Francis has a further shock in store...

This book identifies and surveys the major themes around 'out-of-field teaching', that is, teaching subjects or year levels without a specialization. This has been an issue in many countries for some time, yet until recently there has been little formal research and poor policy responses to related problems. This book arises out of collaborations between members of an international group of researchers and practitioners from Australia, Germany, Ireland, England, South Africa, Indonesia and the United States. Cross-national comparisons of ideas through case studies, descriptions of practice and research data interrogates the experiences, practices, and contexts relating to out-of-field teaching. In particular, the book considers the phenomenon of out-of-field teaching in relation to national policy contexts, local school leadership practices, professional development. The book represents an essential contribution on a highly topical issue that has implications for quality and equitable education around the globe.
